RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Funded – Active:

Internal Pilot Grant Awards - Gratitude Study

Masonic Cancer Center 7/1/17 – 6/30/18
Kreitzer: PI $25,000

This study is a result of a research collaborative with CaringBridge. Established in 1997, CaringBridge is an online social network serving over 215,000 people daily and over 27 million people annually in over 230 countries & territories around the world. 50 million journals were transferred to university super computers for analysis. There is considerable research on the health benefits of cultivating gratitude even in the face of serious illness. A gratitude intervention will be launched on the CaringBridge site. This grant will study the impact of the intervention among site users.

Mind-body Awareness Training and Brain-Computer Interface

NIH (He) 5R01-AT009263-02 9/1/2016 – 8/31/2021
Kreitzer: Co-I $2,155,589

There are currently over five million people in the United States suffering from various degrees of paralysis. Brain-computer interface technology allows users to interact with their environment without muscular control, by sensing and decoding the user's thoughts. The general goal of the proposed research is to investigate whether and how experience with MBAT can improve subjects' ability to learn and use a sensorimotor-rhythm-based BCI.

Mindful Movement for Physical Activity and Wellbeing in Older Adults: A Community Based Randomized Hybrid Effectiveness-Implementation Study

NIH R21/R33 (Evans) 1R21AT009110-01A1 3/1/17 – 2/28/19
Kreitzer: Co-I $450,510

Physical inactivity has reached pandemic proportions and is associated with increased morbidity, mortality, and healthcare costs. Of particular concern is that most middle to older age adults fall far short of recommendations for health enhancing physical activities. The proposed research will take a novel approach to tackling this problem by combining mindfulness with behavioral strategies in a unique 'Mindful Movement' program offered through YMCA community facilities.

Role: Co-I

Impact of Social Technology on Wellbeing

Kreitzer: PI 07/01/17 – 07/01/19

This study is measuring the impact of mind/body practices (gratitude, lovingkindness and mindfulness) on health outcomes of participants on CaringBridge, an online community of people experiencing a health challenge.

Nursing Leadership in Integrative Health and Healing

George Family Foundation 07/01/2010 – 06/30/2019
Kreitzer (PI)

This grant supports fellowships and co-curricular leadership development activities for doctorate of nursing practice in integrative health and healing students.

Role: PI

Funded – Complete:

Mindfulness & Stress Management Study for Cardiac Patients

Kreitzer: Co-I (Everson-Rose) 5/1/2016 – 9/1/2017
$100,000

In this pilot study, the University of Minnesota and Fairview Health Services are partnering to examine how a Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR) course affects heart patients who have been recommended for a traditional cardiac rehabilitation program.

Participants that enroll in the study will be randomly assigned into one of two groups: one that completes an MBSR program and one that does not. They will do 3 in-person assessments, and 1 phone assessment over 9 months. All participants will receive stress management resources and be compensated for their time in the study

National Coordinating Center for Integrative Medicine

UE1HP27710 9/1/2014 – 8/31/2017
 Academic Consortium for Integrative Medicine & Health (University of Arizona (HRSA Prime))
 Kreitzer: Consultant $27,000 (sub to U of M only)

The National Coordinating Center for Integrative Medicine will serve as a connecting organization for the academic schools and colleges with programs in integrative health. Dr. Kreitzer will represent nursing on the IPLT and take leadership in disseminating curricula to a range of health professionals including nursing.

Caring Bridge

Understanding the Impact of Social Technology on Wellbeing, Altruism & Health Outcomes
 Kreitzer – PI 7/1/16-6/30/17
 $228,961

This is a collaborative project that seeks to understand how social technology (CaringBridge) helps people; to learn about the perceived benefits from users as well as how it could be improved and additional resources that would be helpful. The scope of work covers five strategies: 1) literature review; 2) assessment of CaringBridge’s website; 3) survey of authors’ experiences when interfacing with the site; 4) qualitative interviews of selected authors; and 5) testing of selected artificial intelligence techniques available to compassionate technology.

CAM Research Education Partnership Project

7 R25 AT003582-08 REVISED 09/01/2007 – 08/31/2016
 NIH
 Kreitzer: Co-I $366,413 (total for transferred funds only)

The broad, long-term objective of this proposal is to facilitate the practice of evidence based health care (EBH) among complementary and alternative medicine (CAM) practitioner. Northwestern Health Sciences University (NWHHSU) is one of the largest accredited CAM educational institutions in the Midwestern United States and home to chiropractic, massage therapy, and acupuncture/Oriental medicine educational programs. Through collaboration with an experienced educational team from the University of Minnesota’s Center for Spirituality & Healing, this project allows NWHHSU to apply EBH and information management (IM) skills in CAM educational and clinical settings. In 2014, the NIH transferred this grant to the University of Minnesota for final completion.

Managing Diabetes Mindfully

Health Partners Research Foundation 12/1/14 – 11/30/2015
 Kreitzer: Co-PI

The goal of this study is to evaluate the feasibility of conducting a trial of a Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR) program for patients with diabetes (DM) on measures of HbA1c, blood pressure, perceived stress, depression, patient self-efficacy and quality of life; and to estimate the effect of a MBSR program for patients with DM. It is expected that MBSR program participants will evidence a trend toward better clinical outcome measures of HbA1c, blood pressure, and standardized measures of diabetes self-management, perceived stress, depression, self-efficacy, and quality-of-life.

Community-Based Interventions for Persons newly diagnosed with Alzheimer’s Disease and their Care Partners: A Pilot Study

Health Partners Research Foundation & Amherst H. Wilder Foundation 1/17/13 – 06/30/2015

Kreitzer: Co-PI

The goal of this study is to evaluate the feasibility of conducting a large randomized controlled trial comparing the effectiveness of a mindfulness-based program to a standard education and support group program, Memory Club, on mood and psychological symptoms, coping, stress reduction, and other outcomes for patients with memory loss and their care partners. It is expected that participants in the mindfulness program will evidence equal or greater benefits than Memory Club participants on outcome measures such as perceived stress, mood, psychological well-being, dyadic intimacy, and perceived caregiver burden. Outcomes in the two groups will then be used to estimate the treatment effect sizes, which will be used to power a future randomized controlled trial.

Learning Tools for Consumer Education – The Taking Charge of Your Health Website

Life Science Foundation 09/19/2005 – 09/18/2014

Kreitzer: Lead Content Expert

The Taking Charge of Your Health website funded by a grant from the Life Science Foundation provides a credible, centralized source of information providing consumers and providers with trusted, user-friendly information about complementary therapies and healing practices; information on how to navigate the healthcare system, and practical strategies for creating healthier lifestyles.

Whole Systems Healing Curriculum Development Grant

Life Science Foundation 04/01/2008 – 01/31/2014

Kreitzer: PI

Curriculum grant to develop a set of courses which utilize complexity theory to explore the influences upon human health of interrelating personal, social, and environmental systems.

Impact of Health Coaching on Clinical and Financial Outcomes

Medica 07/01/2011 – 12/31/2012

Kreitzer: PI $181,292

The overall goal of this study is to determine how our understanding of health coaching and its value/outcomes/delivery methods can be used to apply to other phases of the health system. This research project serves as an ambitious pilot study using the Medica Health Coaching program for observational study purposes to compare to a national representative sample. Medica's program is one of the largest health coaching programs within an insured population in the United States to date. The lessons learned, successes, and challenges faced along the way have important implications for refining and shaping health coaching programs across the country, and serve to advance the field of health promotion.

Impact of Meditative Movement on Health Outcomes of Older Adults in Long-Term Care Facilities

Clinical and Translational Science Institute 08/01/2010 – 01/31/2012

Kreitzer: PI $53,950

The overall purpose of this study is to examine the impact of meditative movement on health outcomes of a select group of assisted living residents. Spring Forest Qigong is one type of meditative movement (MM) which is comprised of 8 movements that can be adapted to a sitting position. This form of Qigong can be performed by those with limited movement and who are frailer than the community dwelling population. The effect of the implementation of Qigong on pain, fall occurrence and serenity scores among assisted living residents will be determined. The feasibility of this intervention for an assisted living nursing home setting and sample as well as a cost benefit analysis will be completed.

Stress Reduction for Caregivers: A Randomized Controlled Pilot Study

NIH R21AT003654-01A1 (Robin Whitebird) 04/01/2007 – 03/31/2011

HealthPartners Research Foundation (NIH prime) $ 137,879 (sub only)

Whitebird: PI

Kreitzer: Co-PI

The goal of this randomized, controlled clinical trial is to test the efficacy of a Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR) program to reduce stress in caregivers. The chronic stress associated with caregiving is significant and associated with psychiatric and physical health effects including depression, anxiety, poor health, compromised immune function and poor quality of life.³⁻⁷ Current programs to help caregivers manage stress and decrease burden provide a multi-component psycho-educational approach. An approach focused specifically on stress reduction could provide greater impact for the long-term chronic stresses of caregiving. Mind-body based complementary therapies such as Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR) may offer a safe, practical, and cost-effective method for stress reduction for caregivers.

Mind-Body Interventions Post Organ Transplant

NIH NINR 1R01 NR008585 08/1/2003 – 04/30/2009

Gross: PI $2.2 million

Kreitzer: Co-PI

Solid organ transplant recipients require life-long immunosuppressive therapy that leads to side effects, complications and chronic symptoms, and reduces health-related quality of life. Pharmacologic options for managing symptoms increase the risks of side effects and drug interactions, and may reduce adherence by complicating an already challenging medication regimen. In contrast, mind-body based complementary therapies, such as Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR), may be ideal to treat distressing symptoms and negative emotions after transplantation. The long-range objective of this study is to develop evidence-based recommendations for non-pharmacologic strategies that provide symptom relief to transplant recipients, and are safe, practical and cost-effective.

Impact of a Residential Integrated Treatment Program on Women with Eating Disorders

Croll, Jillian: PI 02/2002 – 02/2009

Kreitzer: Co-PI

BlueCross Blue Shield Foundation $300,000

Park Nicollet Foundation $100,000

This grant is funding a five year comprehensive evaluation of an integrated residential treatment program for women with eating disorders. The Anna Westin House offers a treatment program that includes conventional therapies as well as acupuncture, mind-body interventions, movement and art therapies, spirituality, energy and manual therapies. Outcomes evaluated will include physical, emotional, and spiritual well-being as well as cost/financial implications

Mindfulness Meditation versus Pharmacotherapy for Chronic Insomniac: A Pilot Study

AHC Faculty Development Grant Program 2006 01/1/2006 – 12/31/2008

Gross: PI

Kreitzer: co-PI

University of Minnesota

FRD 06-27

$244,715

The goal is to conduct pilot work and develop proposals aimed at securing NIH-funding for a full-scale randomized controlled trial of the efficacy and cost-effectiveness of Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction in chronic insomnia. This is a competitive start-up award to provide resources to interdisciplinary teams seeking NIH-funding for research consistent with the NIH Road Map strategy to address health problems that are too complex for a single narrow disciplinary focus. Dr. Kreitzer serves as a Co-Investigator.

Outcomes related to CAM Education in an Academic Health Center

NIH R25 AT00556-01

09/28/2000 – 07/31/2005

CAM Curriculum Program Project

$1.6 million

Kreitzer: PI

This grant was awarded to develop, implement and evaluate a curriculum in complementary therapies and healing practices in the Academic Health Center at the University of Minnesota. The grant facilitated integration of complementary therapy content into the Schools of Medicine, Nursing, Pharmacy and expanded the graduate minor in complementary therapies and healing practices. Additionally, the grant funded educational research on attitudes of faculty and staff towards complementary approaches to healing and outcomes related to educational strategies.

Impact of an Inner Life Formation Program on Health Professional Students and Practitioners

Fetzer Institute

01/1/2002 – 12/31/2005

Kreitzer: PI

$95,000

The Center for Spirituality & Healing at the University of Minnesota received extramural funding to develop and implement a program called The Inner Life of Healers. The program has two components: a student formation program and a health professional renewal program. Fetzer Institute has funded Dr. Kreitzer to conduct a longitudinal investigation on the impact of a healer formation program on well-being and performance.

Impact of Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction on Symptom Management in Kidney Transplant

Academic Health Center

09/29/2001 – 09/28/03

Faculty Research Development Award

$195,000

University of Minnesota

Gross: PI

Kreitzer: Co-PI

The study will explore the use of meditation and yoga as mind-body-based complementary therapies to improve kidney transplant recipient's health-related quality of life. The overall goals of the study are to assess whether kidney recipients who consistently practice meditation and yoga experience fewer symptoms of anxiety, depression and sleep disturbance; utilize fewer symptom-control medications; and report improved health-related quality of life.

The Efficacy of Intercessory Prayer on Multiple Sclerosis Outcomes: A Double-Blind, Randomized, Controlled Trial

Hatgidakis: PI 1999 – 2001

NIH CAM Clinical Research Fellowship Program

1-T32-AT00487-01 (Grimm - PI) 07/1/2006 – 06/30/2007
NIH-NCCAM $1.6 million
Training a New Generation of CAM Clinical Investigators
Kreitzer: co-program director, student advisor, and member of the Advisory Board of the Training Program

This grant provides funding for up to nine post-doctoral fellows per year. The fellows who undergo the training program are expected to meet the growing need for qualified investigators capable of evaluating the safety and effectiveness of CAM therapies. Fellows will be a part of the Minnesota Program in CAM Clinical Research.

NIH CAM Clinical Research Fellowship Program

1-K30-AT00068-01 (Grimm – PI) 09/15/2002 – 08/31/2007
NCCAM-NIH $1,332,832
Kreitzer: co-program director, student advisor, and member of the Advisory Board of the Training Program

This grant provides resources to build the infrastructure for the Minnesota Program in CAM Clinical Research. Under this grant, pre- and post-doctoral fellows are trained to conduct and evaluate clinical research in complementary and alternative medicine (CAM). The fellows who undergo the training program are expected to meet the growing need for qualified investigators capable of evaluating the safety and effectiveness of CAM therapies.
